Help recognize Bill in his retirement by donating to assist plant pathology graduate students in their pursuit of higher education at CSU.

As something Bill is incredibly passionate about, we invite you to help encourage our graduate students pursuing excellence in research, teaching, and extension degrees and projects that will help them become dynamic and engaged leaders in agriculture for Colorado and the U.S. Worthy graduate students receive a certificate and monetary stipend at BSPM’s annual awards recognition each fall.

“I am personally working to get the following fund endowed so it can earn interest for scholarships in the future. An endowment requires a minimum of $25,000 which is invested by the CSU Foundation so the interest can be available for distribution to our deserving graduate students. Once endowed, new donations and interest continue to be invested to provide greater opportunities for deserving students each year. It has been very rewarding to view the excited response of these young professionals who become even more devoted to their future profession and service to agriculture in our state and nation. Thank you so much.” - Bill Jacobi
